Do you remember the days when you first started to smoke?

ALL CIGARETTES tasted somewhat alike to you, but after a while you noticed that some cigarettes were decidedly stronger than others... Remember?

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. There is no argument about that. Their mildness is a feature as distinctive as their pack-age or their trade mark.

Their tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still.

Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—but not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

In this nerve-racking time, smokers—men and women—are showing a decided preference for milder cigarettes.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

COURT OF APPEALS TO HEAR TWO CASES

Theater News and Reviews

Relaxes Notice That Will Be Here Aug. 2
for Hearings.

Short court of appear
two cases here has notified Clerk of Burgs.

Two former stage stars, Vicki Heming, Ralph Bellamy and Alex
Kirkland who are rapidly becoming popular favorites in Hollywood, are to be seen in the leading roles of the Fox spine-chilling thriller, "Almost Married," which will be seen Friday and Saturday at the Ohio theater.

Miss Heming, who makes her screen debut in this film, is reported to have made her mark in the screen colony over night and is scheduled to appear in several starting roles in the near future.

Based on Andrew Soutar's weird novel, "The Devil's Triangle," and adapted for the screen by Wallace Smith, "Almost Married" is an unusually human mystery story.

Painting its characters in a vivid and believable fashion, it depicts the struggles of two young persons to free themselves from the terrifying spell cast over them by the mammoth maniac who is obsessed with the thought that he must destroy those whom he loves most dearly.

Thrills of modern life, exciting happenings which appear daily in newspapers and the engrossing adventure of a young man and woman who find the fight for love and happiness as hazardous as the most fantastic jungle adventure form the plot details of "The Wet Parade," which will open Friday for a two-day showing at the State theater.

the provisions of the new federal relief bill.

With the general were Major E.

the commission, and O. W. Merrill, state highway director.

The commission members decided on the trip, Tuesday, as a means of familiarizing themselves with the methods of procedure in the bill, before making any attempt to obtain funds for Ohio under its provisions.

One of the points the commission will study is the question whether counties may borrow di-state itself can not obtain federal relief because of limitations in the Ohio constitution. It was estimated about $1,000,000 will be needed to take up relief bonds in several counties, including Summit, Stark,

the brick and concrete caused con-

Killed by Excess.

Americans soon will be able to quit worrying about that form of police brutality known as the third degree. Like many another practice which has its uses it is being outlawed by its excessive use. Police, collectively, are being made to understand that to use it is to risk their jobs.

The third degree in moderate form always has had its uses. In most cases police can be depended upon to stay within the limits of reason, but the public has lost its confidence in their judgment. Until that confidence is restored police departments will be watched closely for evidence of brutality in obtaining confessions.

One statement made by the district attorney in connection with the death of a prisoner in Nassau county, New York, has a bearing on the situation as it exists today. The prisoner apparently was killed by third degree methods; the attorney explained it this way: "Apparently an over-enthusiastic police officer broke the prisoner's Adam's apple."

The word "over-enthusiastic" is a key to understanding. Society is not charging police with brutality for brutality's sake, although there undoubtedly have been instances of it. It is charging police with failure to exercise proper discretion in handling prisoners from whom they are trying to get confessions. Speaking generally, the public is of the opinion that it would rather be victimized by an occasional criminal wanting to be secretive than to stand responsible for the actions of its policemen trying to extort a confession. It is afraid of their "over-enthusiasm."

Police, being dependent on public good will for their pay and efficiency, probably will recognize the limitations placed upon them. The third degree, under a cloud, is going to be heard of less and less as police continue to burn their fingers on it.

What Will Mellon Say?

The return of Ambassador Mellon to the United States for a visit and conference with President Hoover is of the utmost importance at this time. Mr. Mellon has had an opportunity to study the European debt problem at close range. He is familiar with the tempos of the British. He will have something definite to offer.

It is becoming plainer every day that a distressing division of opinion is going to cause severe friction in the debt issue. As illustrated recently by the acrimonious retort of Walter Lippmann, champion of the international viewpoint, to William Randolph Hearst, isolationist, the thought of compromise is repugnant to both sides.

Isolationists refuse to see anything but the debts and the tremendous figures involved in them. They stretch a direct line from the debts to the taxpayers, pointing out with telling force that it is not right for the United States to pay for the World war. Money loaned to Europe represented this nation's surplus; it should not be sacrificed.

Internationalists, on the other hand, seek to strike a delicate balance between what should be and what can be. They agree that the debts should be paid, but deny that they will be paid. They have a philosophical approach to the matter. They recommend the procedure followed by private business in dealing with bad debts—make as good a settlement as possible and forget about the rest.

They claim that an immediate settlement would stimulate international trade past the power of any other factor to equal. They seem to be a population accustomed to thinking of the debts as money due and collectable of the rightness of a conception in which the debts would be settled at a considerable loss for the sake of giving a boost to trade. Obviously, the international viewpoint is harder to get. The isolationists have the edge in the contest.

No Place To Go.

When the national prohibition board of strategy finds itself in a position where it must give "unofficial" backing to a candidate for the presidency there can no longer be any doubt that organized drys are political orphans in the United States. It may be argued that repeal or revision of the 18th amendment is still a long way in the future, but the distance is more than halved by prohibitionists' loss of their most powerful defensive weapon—a major political party.

The Republican inner council did not dare expect more than it is getting by its moderate and equivocal stand on prohibition in the party's platform. Equivocation, in itself, was a sign of wavering sufficiently clear to alienate the full support of prohibitionists. But when there is nothing else to grasp a straw looks pretty good to a drowning man; Democrats saw to it that no dry with honest convictions ever would swim through the rising tide of wet sentiment to depend on them.

President Hoover, prohibitionists have made plain, is of no more importance in their outlook for a political champion than the party he leads or the platform on which he must stand. Drys want to believe he is one of them; there is nothing on record to prove that he is not. At the same time Republican has overlooked that the prohibition board of strategy, by inauthenticating that the President is going to betray his party on this important national question, has insured that party's good faith in adopting a plank for re-submission.

President Hoover could eliminate this confusion by a clear statement of his position. The United States is waiting—he has been waiting since the Republican national convention for that statement. Some one is wrong about the President's belief. Who is it?

Universal Agreement.

Some people who have dared to dream of complete disarmament will be only mildly interested in the announcement that the United States, Great Britain and France have agreed upon a substantial reduction in land, naval and air armaments. Neither will they see much to hope for in drafts of the probable text of the resolution to be adopted by the world disarmament conference before it adjourns within the next few days.

The resolution will be a formality, softening the shock of realizing that representatives of every important nation in the world have been working in Geneva since February to make progress toward disarmament and have accomplished little, except to demonstrate that international action against war is destined to remain an ideal for years to come. If causing dreamers to face reality be an accomplishment, the conference has done at least that much.

The millions who have tried to follow its work realize that it is destined to produce nothing tangible. Agreement among the United States, Great Britain and France, for instance, is on principle only; no reduction in armaments is possible until details have been worked out. The Geneva conference bogged down in that mire. Representatives attending it were agreed on only one thing—that the world's armament burden was too heavy. On ways of reducing it while safeguarding widely varying requirements of national safety they disagreed violently.

But there is another side to the conference, and it should not be obscured by the despondency of failure. It will reconvene late in the fall to attack again its seemingly impossible task. It is the part of wisdom to be patient; the penalty of impatience is a distorted outlook. Despite what amounts in fact to failure, there has been world disarmament conference and there will be more. A start has been made. A quarter of a century ago that would have represented progress. True, so far as the results of the conference are concerned, there is little to say. But hope for disarmament only has been discouraged. Nothing has happened to kill it, or even to make it ashamed.

Saddest of All.

The old-fashioned school of political reform held a comforting belief that exposure was the surest way to stop corruption. A crooked politician was supposed to fear nothing more than he feared the uncovering of evidence that he was unfit to hold office. Corruption was supposed to disappear instantly under the healthy influence of light.

That was the belief of the old-fashioned school, with many members still in circulation. What disappointments await them in every quarter these more modern days. What a reckless overturning of theory they are treated to whenever they happen to glance. What sadness must fill their faithful hearts as they realize that exposure of corruption, in this new day, has no more effect on the politician responsible for it than telling a policeman there is a speakeasy on his beat.

Consider a recent occurrence in New York City, which, because it is into political corruption on a grand scale, makes an example of proportions so great that they help to drive home the desired points. Against a background of knowledge concerning victimization of New York taxpayers by politicians—the Seneca investigation has provided most Americans with that background—examine a recent political appointment by Mayor James J. Walker, who should have shriveled up and disappeared long ago, according to the old idea of political reform.

Overexposure hasn't slowed him up a bit, however. While he is preparing his answer to the charges standing against him—while he is on trial for his political life, the people like to believe—New York should be safe against continuation of corruption so far as he is able to control it; the old-fashioned reformers would expect that much, at least. But in the face of what should be necessity for caution, mayor Walker has dared to make an insultingly questionable appointment—a personal friend, already in a good position with the city for three years, assured of his job for six more years at a salary of $22,500 a year.

Similar defiance of public opinion could be made with impunity in many cities, perhaps on a smaller scale. Saddest of all facts in degeneration of government is this: Corruption is unashamed. Those who profit by it are powerful enough to defy those who are victimized by it. New York is merely a startling example. It is its position as an example, needless to add, which is making of Mayor James J. Walker and the kind of government for which he is a symbol a fundamental issue in the presidential campaign of his state's governor, Franklin D. Roosevelt—the man who must decide within a short time whether or not Mr. Walker is to be allowed to continue as head of this nation's largest city.

Comment of the Press

INVESTMENT PRIVILEGES.

Bitter criticism has been leveled at Senator James Couzens of Michigan because most of his huge fortune is invested in tax free securities. His large holdings of that class of securities became public during consideration of the income tax bill. He wanted higher taxes levied on large fortunes. He was criticized as the plan he had would affect his income taxes more lightly than it would affect those of the average investors.

Friends of the Michigan senator claim his fortune was put in tax free securities at the time he was elected to the senate. Prior to that time he had held bank stock, railroad and corporation stocks and bonds. It was said to be his thought that he should forfeit the Senate without his fortune being invested in securities that might be affected by legislation under consideration. It might be well for the American people if all other members of the senate would follow the example of the Michigan senator, as it would spare them the temptation to legislate for their own interests at times.

President Hoover, prohibitionists have made plain, is of no more importance in their outlook for a political champion than the party he leads or the platform on which he must stand. Drys want to believe he is one of them; there is nothing on record to prove that he is not. At the same time Republican

High Blood Pressure Overtaxes Heart.

Worry, fear and emotional excitement are among the common causes of high blood pressure, and during our present stormy times it is probable that an unusual number of persons suffer from it. There are many causes of high blood pressure, of course, but I regard emotional strain as one of the most important.

Injection, hardening of the arteries, kidney disease, heart disease, and certain infectious diseases are causes that can be controlled by medicines and treatment, but emotional strain and excitement are difficult for the physician to treat. Only the sufferer can avoid and prevent emotional distress. Even with great care, it is difficult to control unexpected emotional disturbances.

Overeating is another cause that the patient can control by his own efforts. A diet may be prescribed by your physician, but good as it may be in quality, it is worthless if too large quantities are consumed. Too much food brings extra flesh, and high blood pressure is more common in overweight individuals than those of normal weight.

These centers of infection should be removed whenever possible. In addition to their relation to high blood pressure, they are detrimental to the general health of the body.

Persistent high blood pressure is dangerous. It places more work upon the heart, and may weaken and damage this vital organ, as the heart becomes enlarged and its muscles weak.

In addition, high blood pressure may affect the kidneys, Bright's disease and other forms of kidney disease are often associated with high pressure. Many of the simple causes I have mentioned are too frequently overlooked by the sufferer.

Too much is expected of medicines, as for a matter of fact very little benefit can be derived from medicines for the cure of high blood pressure. The relief given there is rest and relaxation for the body.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Beatrice looked blank, then suddenly she giggled—it always took her some time to see the point of anything.

"So you told him! Was he very shocked?" She looked arately at Anderson's immovable face. "My poor little mother will hardly speak to me this morning," she gushed. "What time did we arrive home, Sondra? It must have been quite 5 o'clock."

"I understand that Sondra was out all night," Anderson said calmly. "And let me assure you that I am not in the least shocked. My education has been liberal."

Beatrice giggled once more, and made a few vapid remarks before she rushed away again. Mr. Anderson always makes me feel so small and young," she explained afterwards to Sondra. "A mere child!"

There was a little silence when she had departed.

"I cannot tolerate that girl," Anderson said presently. Sondra laughed. "Why not, she's quite harmless. I like her."

"She's such a shocking har," Anderson answered calmly. "I don't object to people selling lies if they're forced to, but I do wish they'd do it in a convincing manner."

Sondra's eyes fell. She felt it was impossible to ask him to explain what he meant.

The air seemed fraught with an ungraspable "something" which she could not understand; or was it her own state of mind that confused her? Perhaps she was just imagining that there was an underlying knowledge in everything Anderson said.

Did he guess the truth? And if not what would he say if she suddenly told him "Mark and I were married yesterday?"

Anderson spoke suddenly, as if reading her thoughts.

"I must send young Merriman a wire to the boat, to wish him luck. I dare say he feels a bit hipped."

"Oh, I don't think so." What a hypocrite she was! Sondra felt as if she stood aside and stared at herself in shocked dismay.

It's a good thing he's a single man," John said casually. I always dislike wives being left behind when it means a long separation, as it probably does in Merriman's case."

Sondra's lips moved stiffly. "Why do you dislike—wives being left behind?"

"He shrugged his shoulders. "It's unsettling for a man: it takes his mind off his work, and handicaps him."

"Isn't that rather hard? Why shouldn't men who have to work abroad be married?"

"'Abroad' is rather a vague term. I was speaking of men who have to go where young Merriman has gone. It's not a woman's country by any means."

"And if . . . if Mark had been a married man?" Sondra asked.

He looked at her steadily. "If Merriman had been a married man, I shouldn't have given him the job," he said.

It was not until late that evening, when Sondra was dressing for dinner, that she remembered the letter which John Anderson had given to her that morning.

She had slipped it into her bag and had forgotten it.

That seemed queer, and very significant of the way in which life had changed during the past 24 hours.

She had even forgotten that her dressmaker was pressing for payment—she had forgotten everything except that with every moment the distance between her and Mark Merriman was increasing by hopeless miles. She took up the little handbag.

The letter was still there, carelessly doubled up as if it was something of no importance.

Sondra tore the flap open without much interest.

What did it matter whether she wore pretty gowns or not? There was no longer anybody in town whom she cared to please.

She flushed a little as she mechanically counted the crisp banknotes.

One thousand dollars! she let the money slip from her fingers to the dressing-table.

Nobody would ever believe her if she told them that in return for such a gift she had given nothing—would never give anything; people would laugh if they knew that moreover Anderson had never asked anything of her—probably never would ask.

It seemed an unusual sort of friendship—affection.

It was so seldom that even a very rich man gave generously without hope of return.

Mark would be horrified; Mark would never understand. She could imagine his indignation.

Some day he would come back! and what then?

For the first time Sondra looked honestly into the future and tried to realize what life would be when—if ever—Mark came home.

She knew that if he made money all would probably be well, but if not—if he came back as he went away—poor, without prospects—what would become of them?

Could she face life in a suburban house—even with his love? she knew that she could not.

There was always John; John would do anything for her—and he would see to Mark's future. Influence meant so much nowadays, the thought comforted her.

Of course Mark would get on—he would make a position in the world, and they would find happiness together.

And in the meantime— It was not yet 24 hours since they had said goodbye, and already it seemed as if it was years ago that she had stood on the pier trying to hide from the world that Mark meant anything more to her than just an ordinary friend who was going abroad.

Not yet 24 hours! and it might be five years before they met again.

Was it possible to still love a man passionately whom one had not seen for five years? People changed so. Mark might grow stout or bald . . . she smiled involuntarily at the thought.

Five years! Five summers, five winters—five glorious springs, and all without Mark. She was his wife, though they had lived together for only a few short hours; she would still be his wife in five years' time—even if he came back stout and bald.

But Mark would come back as he had gone away—keen, upright, alert . . .

Sudden tears dimmed her eyes as she recalled his face; how horrible of her to have such thoughts of him.

Flora came into the room unceremoniously.

"Not ready yet of course" . . . she said dismally. "The car's waiting—do hurry up. Here's a wire for you—it came hours ago, but I forgot about it." She flung the yellow envelope down on the dressing-table beside Anderson's breakfast; her eyes narrowing as she saw them, but she made no comment.

"Will John Anderson be over to night?" she asked.

"I believe so."

300-PIECE BAND ON FAIR PROGRAM

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 21.—A boy's band of 300 pieces comprising young musicians from high school bands in all parts of Ohio, will be assembled as a feature of George Washington's bicentennial pageant at the Ohio state fair here, Aug. 29 to Sept. 3. The band will appear in a parade in which every county in the state is expected to be represented by floats.

"You're wasting time, Noel," I said. "I'll get the next second, making my voice stern. "Every second we wait here makes a longer time for me to ride this thing with you on it, you know. So let's get started."

Noel Takes the Wheel

He obeyed, and I pedaled out of the driveway, slowly at first, and then, when I got into the deserted main road, smooth as a billiard table, I made my feet go faster and faster until we were making very respectable time indeed over the level road.

When the road began to rise, as it does in any direction out of Sackettville, I did not feel the strain at first. I was so excited, but when part way up the hill Noel indicated a side road that gave me a level going again for a little way, I realized from my pumping heart

"That's why you brought it," he said, a boyish admiration in his voice.

"That and speed," I acknowledged easily. "I know you must hurry back. Ronald and I must let Mr. Briston get far ahead of us."

Ronald turned and started at me.

"That's why you brought it," he said, a boyish admiration in his voice.

"That and speed," I acknowledged easily. "I know you must hurry back. Ronald and I must let Mr. Briston get far ahead of us."

Then without a sound, a sharp noise retorted, turning away, and I put my hand upon the wheel again.

"We'll take turns at this, Ronald," I told him. "I'm going to be selfish and let you take most of the uphill work."

"I should think so," Ronald said, bridling.

"But we mustn't get separated from each other," I went on, "at least not for more than a few minutes at a time. Let us agree upon this. The one who is ahead upon the bicycle will turn into any road that Mr. Briston takes, but will only stay on it long enough to see that he intends to travel along it, then come back to the point where the road forked. The walker, behind, will wait at the first fork of the road for the cyclist to come back. Is that clear?"

"Yes, indeed," Ronald answered, and carefully, cautiously, afraid almost to breathe, we took up the trail of the unsuspecting man ahead.

Never in my life have I put in such eerie hours or such hard ones physically. Luckily I am a good walker, but I had done comparatively little of it in the summer following the birth of my baby daughter. The autumn days had tempted me to some long strolls, and I thanked my particular little jeans for them, as I alternately pedaled and paced up the winding mountain road in Samuel Briston's wake.

That he knew exactly where he was going was evident. Turning at almost every fork into a new road, he came at last to a still where the road ended. It was too dark to see what was beyond the still, but we were close enough behind him to hear him climbing it. A glimmer of starlight, for we were on the top of the mountain gave us a dim outline of his figure at the top.

"All right. You already gone," he called back. "I'll catch up with you."

"I ducked under here until I was sure who it was," he whispered. "You've made good time."

"How far ahead is he?" I asked.

"Less than a quarter mile," he answered. "I'm glad you brought the bicycle. On this dirt road, wherever we can use it, there won't be half the chance of his hearing that there would be of foot steps."

Noel turned and started at me.

"That's why you brought it," he said, a boyish admiration in his voice.

"That and speed," I acknowledged easily. "I know you must hurry back. Ronald and I must let Mr. Briston get far ahead of us."

"That and speed," I acknowledged easily. "I know you must hurry back. Ronald and I must let Mr. Briston get far ahead of us."

"All right. You already gone," he called back. "I'll catch up with you."

"I ducked under here until I was sure who it was," he whispered. "You've made good time."

"How far ahead is he?" I asked.

"Less than a quarter mile," he answered. "I'm glad you brought the bicycle. On this dirt road, wherever we can use it, there won't be half the chance of his hearing that there would be of foot steps."

Noel turned and started at me.

"That's why you brought it," he said, a boyish admiration in his voice.

Hurdlers Are Bright Spot on American Olympic Team

YANKS EXPECTED TO TAKE FIRST THREE POSITIONS IN EVENT

Keller, Saling, Beard Should Finish 1-2-3; Foreigners Weaker.

By The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 21.—The United States not only should regain the Olympic high hurdles championship this year but finish 1-2-3 in the final unless some misfortune along the timbered 110-meter route befalls Jack Keller, George Saling and Percy Beard.

The home forces never have had a faster trip for this spectacular event. All have broken world records and Keller, running against the wind, tied the world mark of 14.4 seconds in capturing the final trial at Palo Alto.

Keller may not be the most stylish of our hurdlers but coaches agree he is the fastest man in the world between the barriers. There has not been much to choose between Keller and Saling, however, on this season's performances. Beard, 1931 national champion, has "raced" his early pace and is counted on to reach his peak in the Olympics.

Not only is the American hurdling delegation stronger than in 1928 but the foreign menace seems weaker. The South Africans who ran our boys dizzy at Amsterdam—Weightman, Smith and Atkinson are missing. The principal foreign contention this time seems due from the German, Wegner, and the Finnish champion, Sjostedt.

From Europe and elsewhere, the visiting hurdlers seem more interested in and better equipped for the 400-meter race. This is the event Lord David Burghley won from our favorites, Morgan Taylor and Frank Cuhel, four years ago. The titled Briton is returning as captain of his team, to defend this honor with his customary courage and enjoyment.

Records Fall as Millers Blast Out 25-3 Victory

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, July 21.—Lou "Shanty" McKenna, the big record book man for the American Association, went to work on an overtime basis today all because of those rampaging Minneapolis Millers.

Catching the innocent Louisville Colonels unaware on a blustering hot day with the mercury standing at 102 degrees, the Millers belted them 15 to 11 in the first game of a doubleheader and then loaded their bats with dynamite to blow them apart, 25 to 8, in the nightcap, which resulted in several new league records.

In that wild second game, the Millers cracked out 32 hits, beating the old record established at 27 by Louisville against Columbus in 1926, equaled the soaring record of 28 runs set by the same Louisville Colonels against St. Paul in 1924; established a record for man-for-man hitting with every Miller bagging two or more hits; broke the record for most runs in a doubleheader with 40; made Derby of the Colonels the most miserable relief pitcher in American Association history by nicking him for 18 hits in 4-2-3 innings without help.

THE HEADLINER

What looks as one of the best games of the Industrial league thus far this season to date is in prospect today as the Marion Steam Shovel and Gasco clubs cross bats at the Shovel athletic field. The two teams are in a deadlock for first place and the winner will be a heavy favorite to capture the Industrial league championship.

The Shovel is expected to start either Snyder or Cook on the hill. The starting pitcher for the Gasco will be either Shorty Richards or Eddie Mautz, probably the former.

The Shovel is expected to start either Snyder or Cook on the hill. The starting pitcher for the Gasco will be either Shorty Richards or Eddie Mautz, probably the former.

The Shovel slipped the Gasco as 8-2 beating in the first round game and the latter is anxious to erase the setback with an all-important win today. The Shovel is just as anxious to make it two in a row. All eyes are on the firework.

HOMESTEAD GRAYS IN 11-4 TRIUMPH OVER MARION TRAVELERS

Colored Team Pounds Out Decisive Win in Exhibition Ball Game.

By BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

The Homestead Grays have long enjoyed the reputation of being the best colored baseball team playing the national pastime on a professional basis. This may or may not be the case but the Grays did prove to the satisfaction of all concerned in Marion yesterday that they were entirely too tough an aggregation to be crossing bats with any ball club which the City of Prestige can make together. The Grays attacked up against the Marion Travelers yesterday afternoon in a twilight tilt at Lincoln park and smacked out an 11-4 victory, not having a particularly difficult time in doing it.

These Homestead Grays, who play ball with a lot of the ease and grace of a major league combination, staged somewhat of a frolic at the expense of the Marion club but the home town team did make it pretty much of a ball game as far as the score was concerned. Seven runs separated the two teams when the final accounting was turned in but the game was close enough most of the way to at least be interesting.

Smoky Joe Williams and Sep Good were dividing the pitching assignment as the game got under way. Good went the route despite a sound shellacking most of the way but Williams got away to strong after five innings of toll.

Goods slants were never very puzzling to the Grays, a total of 18 safeties being rapped out, enough to win most any ball game. The Travelers rammed out nine hits off Williams in his five-inning stay and then added another four off the togs of his successor, Strong. Among the 13 base knocks were two four-play wallops by Glenn Price and Shiek Cross. Price lined his over the fence out of the park. Three of the invading team lined out homers off Good.

EX-LEGION PLAYERS FORM DIAMOND CLUB

Walter Hane Directing Junior Baseball Team; Practicing Regularly.

The Ex-Legion baseball club, an amateur organization out of existence since the season of 1930 when it played a number of games with teams of the Marion County American Legion Junior baseball league, is being reorganized under the management of Walter E. Hane. Hane's last activity in local baseball circles was in 1930 when he served as manager of the Marion Nationals, Marion County and sixth district American Legion champions.

The team has no official connection with the American Legion and is not sponsored by the local post. However, of the 40 boys who have reported, 30 will be eligible to play in the Marion County American Legion Junior baseball league, should that organization be revived next season.

A schedule of games during August and September is being arranged mostly with American Legion district champions and run-ups.

The experienced players who have reported include E. Castner, Long, Atkinson, F. Vestal, H. George, D. Lindsey, C. Caris and F. Detwiler, formerly with the 1930 Marion Nationals; Don McAninch of the 1929 Junior Eagles, and J. Vestal of the 1930 Public Pep club.

The Ex-Legionnaires have been working out since July 1st and

INDIANS COMPLETE ROAD TOUR WITH 8-1 WIN OVER RED SOX

Tribe, However, Gains Little as Yanks, A's Retain Good Form.

By Associated Press
It is rather late in the season for the Cleveland Indians to start going somewhere in the American league, but the results of their recent tour of the east indicate they still may make some progress.

The Indians outshone all rivals in both circuits in the intersectional series which winds up today and with a few good breaks at home in the next week or two they stand a good chance of getting into the fight.

Three inter-sectional games to day remained to be fought for the final record cards for the Indians can be compiled, but Cleveland's record of 14 victories to 10, four defeats can't be beaten.

The Red Men topped their tour yesterday by CHUCK KLEIN

rounding the bases—PHIL

Boston Red Sox 8 to 1.

The two teams still ahead of Cleveland, the New York Yankees and the Athletics didn't yield an inch yesterday. The Yanks made it five straight over the Chicago White Sox, 7 to 2.

The Athletics pounded out an 8 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Browns for their sixth consecutive victory and the Browns eleventh defeat. Washington salvaged a game out of the Detroit series after losing three and going into the second division, trimming the Tigers 4-1.

Chuck Klein was the leading fig-

Presbyterians File Protest on Game

Just when the city softball commission had cleared the docket of all protested games another has been tossed into the copper for consideration by the diamond moguls.

The latest one comes as the result of the Calvary-Presbyterian game in the No. 1 Sunday school league Tuesday. Calvary won the game 4-1 with a last inning rally. The Presbyterians promptly dug up a charge that Courtney, who batted in the seventh as a pinch hitter, is ineligible. The allegation is that Courtney is ineligible based on the purported fact that he was in the Calvary lineup at any time before July 1, which according to the dictates of the game here, would make him ineligible for the rest of the current season.

This protest will be taken up at the next regular session of the commission, which is slated for the first Wednesday in August.

At the beginning of the year States compared with each other in motor vehicle for one to 200 for the each 442 residents of the United States.

CHICAGO LAUNCHES MOVE TO REBUILD

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, July 21—All worn out and discouraged in their fight to
league race, Chicago's White Sox decided to wreck and rebuild for next season.

Manager Lew Fonseca already has started out on one of many shopping trips in the minor leagues and will spend much of his time during the rest of the season hunting "Ivory" and experimenting with his purchases.

One of his first wrecking acts came yesterday with the outright release of Cecil Pat Caraway to Pat Schalk's Buffalo club of the International league. The deal was expected to place the White Sox in position to lay first claim on Carnegie, Buffalo's heavy hitting outfielder.

EQUIPOISE SEEKS ANOTHER VICTORY

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, July 21—Equipoise will accept his heavy assigned burden of 184 pounds in the rich
Arlington handicap Saturday.

Although the fleet son of Penant has never carried such a load, trainer Fred Hopkins said he was confident he could do so and capture the rich stake race winner.
The C. V. Whitney bread winner will be out after his eighth consecutive victory.

The Arlington handicap will have gross value of approximately $25,000.

Presbyterians 12-2 in the other two

FARMER HITS SCHOOL LEVY

MUST FIX CHARGE OF FEDERAL LOANS

Hoover Expected To Approve Relief Bill in Short Time.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 21.—What the toll shall be for federal loans to states, municipalities and private firms remains to be announced after President Hoover signs the $2,122,000,000 relief bill now on his desk.

The bill itself fixes the interest on loans to states from the $300,000,000 "destitution fund" at three per cent; it leaves to directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation the charges on other advances.

Under the first relief bill, establishing the corporation, directors made loans to railroads at 6 per cent; those to banks 5½. There was nothing definite, however, to indicate in advance what the levy would be on new borrowings for demands and collecting 270 mills claimed due as additional taxes.

The electors of Dover rural school district last November voted in favor of a 270 mill levy for school purposes.

Myers claims that the board of education is causing a levy of 270 mills to be taxed and levied on his property contrary to and in violation of article 12, section 5 of the Ohio constitution and the state school commissioner had no authority to levy or direct the levy of tax, and that the assessment of tax is not in uniform operation.

Hemorrhoid

Sufferers

End Your Pile Misery Quick

No Cutting—No Salves

Thousands of pile sufferers do not know that the cause of piles is internal—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel.

That is the scientific truth about piles—the reason why salves and suppositories do not give permanent relief, why cutting does not remove the cause.

Youritching, bleeding or protruding piles will only go when you actually remove the cause and not one minute before. External treatments can't do this—an internal medicine should be used.

HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts.

HEM-ROID tablets have such a remarkable record of success in this city that Henney & Cooper and all good druggists urge every sufferer to try HEM-ROID—and guarantee money-back if it does not end their piles, no matter how stubborn the case—Adv.

GRAND JURY PROBE OF SHORTAGE OPENS

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., July 21.—The identity of persons responsible for a shortage of at least $477,700 in the accounts of Cuyahoga county, was sought today in a special investigation by the county grand jury.

Meeting 40 days ahead of schedule, the jury delved into a maze of intricate book-keeping which for eight years covered up discrepancies sometimes as high as $2,500,000.

The $477,700 was reported by State Examiner James N. Main as an actual cash shortage, but there is the possibility that the shortage may be far in excess of that amount.

STOCK MARKET AS DULL DAY

Faces Forward, but Advances Are of Minor Nature.

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, July 21.—The stock market faced forward today, but stayed at the bimble of the upper trading level of the July trading session.

The market was extremely quiet, and was more inclined to work than otherwise. Trades generally, however, were inclined to be tame, pending indications as whether the list was again up or down at the level at which the week's rally was checked.

One of the leading industrialists stayed in a narrow fractional, but some of the food shares, and specialties worked higher, advancing about one to two points. Included: Santa Fe, the Pacific, Norfolk & Western, and Hudson, Loos Wiles, Loew's, Loew's Grand Union, and Pernicino, Brooklyn, New York, and Freeport, Texas. The market closed off for a time in some volume, but fractional recessions were issues as American Can, Western Telephone and Air Regulation were recovered. National Texas Gulf, Sulphur, and Steel common and preferred, and fractional gains. McKeen gained ever in some volume, coincident with publication of its earnings, but the stock was barely up.

The second quarter and first half earnings statements, about which there have been forebodings, began to appear in some volume, and on the whole, the exhibit to date seems somewhat better than anticipated, but no worse. Buying of some stocks, such as Loew's, Beechwood and Loos Wiles appeared to be prompted by analysis of their recent earnings. The bearishly inclined are basing on the fact that third quarter earnings are likely to make on a worse showing than anticipated, but the more cheerfully inclined observers point out that there should be some autumn recovery before those reports must be digested.

with the tax commission with the list.

Auditor Earl E. Thomas this morning said that the Marion Savings bank, the Commercial bank and the Citizens Building & Loan Co., all closed institutions, had paid the two-mill tax on deposits, but that the Marion National bank never had filed a return. It now remains for the tax commission, the comptroller of the currency and the bank receiver to determine whether the institution or the depositors shall pay the tax, he said.

This amount would be levied with other taxes, and would affect approximately 2,500 depositors of the Marion National bank.
